Setting: I am in a triathlon race.

Character(s): me

External conflict: I am very very tired and have two dogs behind me.

Solution: run faster and faster

Internal conflict: whether I should stop or not.

Solution: just keep running

Last year I had a triathlon race. I woke up at four in the morning to prepare for the race. The first thing was swimming, which was my strength. After swimming, was the biking park which is the longest part in the triathlon. It is a great time to rest and prepare for the last thing, running. Running was my weakest sport in the triathlon. While I was running, my legs and lungs were super tired. It felt like my muscles were burning. Near the end of the race, I saw two dogs playing on the side of the road and I started to worry. "Is the dog gonna chase me? Good doggy, good doggy don't see me", I thought. However things usually don't work the way you think, and this was one of those times. The dogs were chasing me, but my body was burning. I wondered if I should keep running to the finish line, or if I should turn around to see whether the dogs are still chasing and have a rest. However I decided not to rest, and I kept running until I reached the finish line.
