1. The setting in The Giver is unique. Describe it and give your opinion on the kind of place it is.

The setting in The Giver is a big community with a lot of strange rules. Every person in the community seems to have their lives planned out since the time they are born. They also use weird words like “the elevens”, which means children that are eleven years old. In my opinion, the whole setting of The Giver seems to have a lot of secrets behind it, and nobody is normal, except the narrator. I feel like something big will happen later on.

2. The Giver is a science fiction book. What is another science fiction book, movie, or TV show that you enjoy? What was interesting about it?

Stranger Things is a TV show that I love very much. I started to watch it a couple of months before season four came out. It is about a group of kids and adults who find out about the secret of another dimension, and the dark sides of the government and their illegal experiments. The group of kids and adult's job is to prevent monsters from other dimensions' destroying the world. I like the TV show very much because the story is very interesting and every character's back story and character development are all very well-written and presented. The pacing of the story is not slow and not fast, which means it is nearly perfect. The villains are also some of the most iconic monsters in the world. I am very excited to see season five.
